Mission

The mission of Project Rebound Cal State LA is to support the higher education and successful reintegration of the formerly incarcerated through the mentorship and living example of other formerly incarcerated students, graduates, faculty, and staff. Project Rebound constructs a life-affirming alternative to the revolving door policies of mass incarceration by making higher education more accessible and supportive of formerly incarcerated student so that they can acquire the knowledge and skills of a university education, enhance their capacity for civic engagement and community leadership, secure meaningful and gratifying employment, empower themselves and their families, and ultimately make stronger, educated, and safer communities.

Abstract

Established in 1967 by John Irwin Ph.D., Project rebound was created in the wake of the rising percentage of recidivism rates in the state of California. Current data proves that recidivism rates (recidivism rates are rates at which individuals go back to jail), are at 70%, this number is decreased to 32 % with an AA/AS degree, furthermore, this rate drops to 10 % when students earn a BA/BS degree and the recidivism rate drops to zero when the student earns a Postbaccalaureate degree and beyond. Supporting the previously incarcerated student does not only decrease recidivism rates but it also creates better citizens of the world.

Current research and data reveal that Project Rebound Scholars outperform the traditional college student by having a 3.6 overall g.p.a. against the traditional students 3.2 over all g.p.a. It is imperative to continue the support for formerly incarcerated students and to ensure their academic success.
